

EFFECTIVE AUGUST 25, 2026

Website terms.

Terms for using the Atarla website and its early-stage product information.

Purpose

Atarla.com explains the company, its research, and an early-stage product direction. The site is for general information. It is not a product offer, investment offer, professional advice, or promise of future availability.

Early-stage information

Concept images, planned capabilities, timelines, and development descriptions may change. Current evidence and future direction are labeled separately where practical.

Site content

Unless a source is named, Atarla owns or licenses the site's text, design, logos, and original visual material. You may link to public pages and quote brief portions with attribution. Other use requires written permission.

Third-party material

Source links, company profiles, and external services are provided for context. Atarla does not control those services and is not responsible for their content, availability, or terms.

No warranty

The site is provided as available. To the extent allowed by law, Atarla disclaims warranties about completeness, accuracy, availability, and fitness for a particular purpose.

Product and AI disclaimer

Descriptions of AI agents, automation, security controls, and hardware are development directions, not guarantees. Any future product should be evaluated for the specific operating, safety, legal, and compliance requirements of its use.

Contact

Questions about these terms may be sent through the contact form at atarla.com/contact. Do not include confidential information unless Atarla has agreed to receive it.